LIBRARIAN/SOFTWARE ENGINEER - Having accumulated expertise in Management Science along the way, this maths and computer science graduate has been able to cap all of her experience with a library qualification, to create an impressive portfolio of skills. Having worked as a systems engineer and a language teacher, this candidate has a strong background in client services combined with impressive time management and prioritising skills. With a proven ability to work independently or collaboratively - but always accurately - this team leader knows how to negotiate deliverables with a diverse group of stakeholders to ensure positive outcomes are achieved.

PROJECT MANAGER – A newly available Melbourne candidate that has recently finalised a contract in the Not For Profit arena, well versed in law, governance and commercial practice. This vivacious candidate brings a sense of energy, intelligence and flexibility to any role, specialising in project management with excellent experience in negotiation of funding and tender proposals for national projects. Successful in the implementation of information and knowledge technology projects this candidate is experienced in offering constructive leadership of multidisciplinary teams across organisations and achieving significant shifts in culture and output.

CATALOGUER - Having distinguished himself as a cataloguer in his homeland, this personable librarian has recently arrived in Australia on a working holiday visa. In Dublin, he was employed by the National Library of Ireland to catalogue a backlog of books that dated back a few centuries! Prior to that, fresh from his post-graduate study in Librarianship, he was the librarian at the Children Acts Advisory Board for three months before it was absorbed by a larger government department. In addition to liaising with the librarian from the larger library to ensure cataloguing was consistent between the two collections, our candidate was required to do extensive specialised reference work for the legal professionals, social workers and post-graduate students who made up the clientele. Currently based in Sydney, but happy to travel anywhere in Australia for work, this candidate is ready to move at the drop of a hat.

When it comes to quality, Zenith has plenty more star players where these gems came from. If any of these candidates are suitable for your workplace, don't hesitate... they won't be available for long KNOWLEDGE MANAGER - A qualified librarian with substantial Knowledge Management experience, this Melbourne-based candidate has distinguished himself by working for an international law firm, providing commercial legal advice to clients around the world. Servicing an international client base of over one thousand legal eagles and their support staff, this candidate was responsible for the firm's content management approach and policy. In addition to this and other functions, he was responsible for managing the knowledge management team, ensuring the efficient workings of the intranet and co-ordinating documents and research for the company's national Employee Relations practice group. In addition to this corporate experience, this personable candidate has substantial experience in Melbourne's public library sector. He is looking for a permanent and rewarding role, but is willing to take on suitable contracts until the right role presents itself.

LIBRARIAN – Returning to Sydney after an extended stint in the southern Queensland public library system, this seasoned Librarian has worked in the south, west, east and north of the New South Wales capital. Accustomed to management and supervising of staff, this candidate is a reference specialist who is equally at home providing children's and adult library services. With over 20 years experience, she has aptitude in providing services that reflect clients needs and wants and achieves this by liaising with the library users community. Bringing strong organisational skills, our candidate is capable of giving valuable input to the creation of policy and is able to think strategically about a libraries future.

LIBRARIAN – Just returning from an extended flirtation with academia at Sydney's University of Technology, this qualified librarian is long on research with equal facility in both the arts and science arenas. Experienced with both DB Textworks and Greenstone and the creation of a digital library and matching database, this keen, well-presented candidate is ready to apply herself to any library role that will broaden her experience.
